Getting the best out of ADR in the COP

Alison Easton, barrister, Coram Chambers and Recorder

Mark Keeley, Mediator and Partner, Freeths LLP

ADR should be a consideration in the resolution of any dispute, and disputes about what is in an incapacitated person's best interests are no exception. But the lack of capacity of P does add a different dynamic to settlement discussions.

CoPPA London is pleased to invite you to a practical session on how to get the most out of ADR in the COP, be that through mediation or a judge-led process.

We are fortunate to be joined by Alison Easton, a leading family and Court of protection barrister with extensive experience of judge-led ADR, together with Mark Keeley, a solicitor and experienced mediator with 400 mediations under his belt and counting, who will share their knowledge and experience of pitfalls to avoid and top tips for success.

We would also be delighted if you would join us for drinks after the talk which will be a great opportunity to meet and network with like-minded colleagues old and new.
